Formed Police Unit Command Staff Course – Ghana

Course Objectives:
The aim of the FPU Command Staff course is to ensure that appointed or potential UN FPU commanders possess the core competencies, skills and necessary knowledge to lead their units at tactical level in accordance with international human rights standards and UN standards in compliance with the UN policing as outlined in the Strategic Guidance Framework for International Police Peacekeeping (SGF).

Upon completion of the training the participants will be able to:

- Direct FPU components and its operations in line with international human rights law, international humanitarian law, UN standards of conduct including the prevention and response to sexual exploitation and abuse (SEA), or standards for UN mandated tasks including, inter alia, the protection of civilians (POC), human rights, response to conflict related sexual violence (CRSV), child protection as well as safety and security procedures;

- Uphold and demonstrate the highest standards of conduct of effective leadership of subordinate units and individuals in day to day general policing and complex police operations by ensuring well-coordinated unity of efforts with other mission components;

- Outline doctrinal references and operational procedures necessary for FPU management concerning decision-making, planning and reporting, conflict management, use of force, arrest and detention, self-sustainment and capacity building.

- Explain the importance of pre-deployment preparations and mission operational readiness as outlined in the Statement of Unit Requirements (SUR) including pre-deployment training in compliance with necessary policy standards.

Target Audience:
The training is primarily intended for appointed or potential FPU Commanders and his/her staff to serve in a UN Peacekeeping Operation and is involved in the Commanders decision-making process.
